HYDROPHOBIA.

Died at St. Albans, Vermont, on the 5th June, of Hydrophobia, the only son of Mr. Linman Weed, aged twelve

The circumstances of this case were briefly as follows :- The boy was bitten about theee months prior to the attack of the disease, by a cat which was supposed to be mad. Through the hurry and alarm of the moment, the cat was killed, consequently the family were left in some doubt whether the animal was really affected with hydrophobia or notthe wound in the boy's hand healing readily, and the time having past by when they expected the poison would take effect, thereby the parents were left in a state of false security, until the terrific approach of the fatal complaint: and even then, their fears were so little alarmed as to delay applying for medical assis ance until the third day.

The symptoms of his disorder were pretty uniform through the whole course of his complaint, excepting they were aggravated, in proportion to the nearness of its approach to its end The patient complained first of a pain in the hand which had been bitten :-

which sensation was soon conveyed to the arm, shoulder and side of the neck: also there was a cute pain felt in the external part of the ear. This was shortly followed by a difficulty in swallowing liquids, though the inside of the throat appeared not much inflamed. His hand nd arm were slightly swollen, and tender to the touch, yet the scar or the pite showed no other marks of inflamaion than appeared in other parts of the and. He would sometimes call for cold water; but on presenting the cup to his lips he would cry, and appeared o be prevented in gratifying his thirst, by severe spasms produced in his throat. At such times his respirations were reatly hurried, attended with rapid and accessive catching of his breath. These effects were similar to those produced from the application of extreme cold water to the surface of the body. Afer several fruitless attempts, he would sometimes swallow, but not without apparent suffocation. The patient was constantly exercised with indescribable listress, and appeared often very restess: he would sometimes cry, and appear rather frantic, and was continually changing positions; other times would smile and manifest a kind of shyness: he slept but little during the night, when he was attended with the most frantic delirium. During these fits towards the close of the disorder, he shewed some disposition to commit injury; would seize the bed clothes with is teeth, and once directed the atter dants to stand back, or he should bite them.

He sometimes had intervals of reason. public, through the medium of several and these were the only times he could of the federal prints, suggesting to Con- swallow liquids. It has been suggested that we are to lose the Hon. John J. CRITTENDEN, as a member of the Senate of the United States. We deeply deplore the entertainment of such an idea by this interesting and distinguished politician. If he does intend to resign, we sincerely hope he will not do so, until the legislature convene; for it would be a misfortune to throw the power of appointing in the hands of the acting governor .-The choice of a successor will no doubt be judiciously made by such an assombly of Representatives as will constitute the legislature next winter.

Reasonable calculations may be made that something, of a liberal nature, will be done for the Transylvania University. The institution is already gaining for the state a literary reputation—and a neglect of any advantages that could be bestowed would be unpardonable. For ourselves we profess no devoted attachment to Mr. Holley, except as the head of a great and flourishing literary institution. In that character he sustains himself most admirably. His morality is unexceptionable. His belief in the doctrines of christianity have never been doubted by those who have heard him preach or talk on the subject of religion-save it be by some sectarian stickler, not competent to estimate the sentiments of any liberal mind.

NO IMPRESSION. I saw a fly on Emma's lip, I saw the insect nectar sip That ruby lip, whose touch would move A heart as cold as Dian's love.

Now Emma, why permit a fly, To kiss so oft without resistance: If I should take that liberty, You'd keep at such a cruel distance.

Ah! man I cannot trust, she said, And Emma blush'd at the confession; But none a harmless fly can dread. For flies you know, make no impression.

Cupid, near a cradle creeping, Saw an infant gently sleeping, With roses blushing on its cheek That seem'd a birth divine to speak,

To ascertain, if earth or heaven, To mortals this fair form had given; He, that little urchin, simple Touch'd its cheek-and left a dimple.
